Greetings Rich,

Received your letter of 9 April '97. You've acknowledged receipt of my letter to you. At this time I feel reasonably well and I trust you are feeling the same.

That Flatem rejected your request to do the interview of me, comes as no surprise. And I suppose it comes as no real surprise to you either.

To do a "hard" interview at my end entails quite a bit - involving time. Let's resolve this difficulty, in this fashion: Write out your questions and I shall send you a "written" response; and any "follow-up" you may think of can be dealt w/ as we proceed. I doubt that I'd attempt to respond to all your questions in one sitting. This way you get your interview and we get around Flatem.

However, I am agreeable to doing this another way (as you might suggest). But I think the written response ought to be okay, let me know what you think.

Nothing new goes on w/ me other than my usual. I have several major projects underway, which involves a food project where food is grown out of state and is trucked into Harley; it's an ambitious undertaking but I think it will be a great success. So in that regard I have been quite busy.

So, let me hear from you and maybe we can

Got this this on. Should we decide the written response is okay, I'll need an idea of your time frame for completing the interview etc., so that I would not hold you up and I can organize my time in completing my other things. I received your letter of 4/23/97 with pleasure, continue to be well and I expect to hear from you relatively soon. I feel responsible for your response.

Yours in Struggle,
It comes as a surprise to you that I am a "faded" interview or in fact quite apt - including time. Let's make I am not sure to your questions and I shall write you a "written" response and follow up
